The film takes its name from the 1938 song Jeepers Creepers, which was featured in the film. Executive Francis Ford Coppola produced, and the film stars Gina Philips, Justin Long, Jonathan Breck, Patricia Belcher, and Eileen Brennan. Philips and Long play two siblings who are targeted by demonic creatures (Breck) in rural Florida. The film is a joint American and German production. Two sequels were released, Jeepers Creepers 2 in 2003 and Jeepers Creepers 3 in 2017. Plot Trish Jenner (Philips) and her brother Darry (Long) travel home from college for spring break. As they drove through rural Florida, an old truck rusted briefly and threatened their tailgates. The vehicle finally passed them. They then saw the same truck parked next to an abandoned church with a man shifting what appeared to be bodies wrapped in bloodstained sheets into a large pipe sticking out of the ground. The man noticed Trish and Darry's car passing by and attempted to run them off the road. After fleeing, Darry convinces Trish to go back to church and investigate. At the church, Darry heard noises coming from inside the pipe and crawled inside with Trish holding on to his feet, but eventually fell. At the bottom, he found a man dying stitches flowed in her stomach, and hundreds of other bodies were sewn into the walls of the basement and ceiling. After Darry fled, the two fled the scene and attempted to contact police at a restaurant. At the restaurant, they were on the phone by a strange woman who warned them they were in danger. Danger. playing jeepers creepers, confused they ignored his warnings. Later, Trish and Darry leave, with two police officers providing security escorts. As they traveled, police learned that the church had burned, and every body evidence had been destroyed. Police were then attacked and killed by the mystery driver, who loaded their bodies into his truck. After hearing the same song again on the radio and pulling over they watched Creeper get out of the police car and suck the tongue out of the dead cop's face. They drive away in terror. Trish and Darry stop at the reclusive old lady's (Brennan) house, and beg her to call the police. The woman obeyed until she saw the driver hiding in her yard. He tried to kill her, but the driver killed her and revealed her inhumane face to Trish and Darry, before chasing after them once more. Trish repeatedly runs the driver with his car but they are horrified to see giant wings ripping off trench coats and flaps in the air. They drive to the local police station, where they are approached by psychic Jezelle Gay Hartman (Patricia Belcher). She reveals herself as the woman who calls them in the restaurant and tells them the true nature of their pursuers: This is an ancient creature, known as Creeper, that wakes up every 23rd spring for twenty-three days to feast on parts of the human body, which then form its own body parts. He also told them that he was looking for his victim through fear, and, by smelling the fear of Trish and Darry, he had found something he liked, but he didn't know what. The wounded creeper arrives and attacks the police station. After turning off the electricity, he gets an entrance to the cell and eats the prisoners to heal. Creeper was swarmed by police but killed a number of them and evaded arrest. Trapped, Jezelle warns Trish and Darry that one of them will die a terrible death. Darry demands to know who, and Jezelle sees Trish. Creeper finds them, but forgives Jezelle because she doesn't have anything she wants. The Creeper cornered Trish and Darry in the interrogation room upstairs, and after sniffing and tasting it, Creeper overruled Trish and chose Darry. Trish offers her life to her brother, but Creeper escapes from the window and flies off with Darry. The next day, Trish is picked up by her parents, and Jezelle returns home with regret. At Creeper's new hideout, an abandoned factory, it is revealed that Creeper has removed the back of Darry's head and taken his eyes off. In the post-credits scene, Creeper drives his truck into the sunset and honks his horn. Actor Justin Long as Darius Darry Jenner Gina Philips as Patricia Trish Jenner Breck as The Creeper Breck also stars as Bald Cop Patricia Belcher as Jezelle Gay Hartman Brandon Smith as Tubbs' Davis Sergeant Eileen Brennan as Cat Lady Jon Beshara as Trooper Robert Gideon Avis-Marie Barnes as Trooper Natasha Weston Tom Tarantini as Roach Roach You can help by adding it. (October 2019) Jeepers Creepers was filmed in north-central Florida in the summer of 2000. [4] Filming locations in the area include the former St. James's Church in Ocala, the former Reddick High School in Reddick, and SW 180th Avenue Road in Dunnellon. [5] Due to time and budget constraints, the film's original third act was cut, so the end of the film was not what Salva intended. Some of the cut-off parts of the first film became part of the sequel. [6] The film's home media was released on DVD and VHS on January 8, 2002 by MGM Home Entertainment. [7] Reception On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 46% approval rating based on 113 reviews, with a weighted average rating of 5.1/10. The site's critical consensus reads: Jeepers Creepers had a promising start. Unfortunately, tension and tension quickly deflate into genre clichés as the film progresses. [8] On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 49 out of 100, based on 24 critics, indicating mixed or average reviews. [9] Scott Foundas of Variety wrote that it was the most conventional and least imaginative of the recent crop of high-grade fever films. Stephen Holden of The New York Times called it a cannier-than-average teen horror film that smashed into a shoot-by-numbers monster hunt. [11] Kevin Thomas of the Los Angeles Times wrote that the film had the scariest opening sequence of any horror images in recent memory but became a funny, spooky and moving horror comedy but too down to the really weirdest to regain the initial aura of suspense. [12] Peter Bradshaw of The Guardian wrote that the film started well but quickly degenerate into a cliché. [13] The audience polled by CinemaScore gave the film an average D on an A+ to F scale.[14] Jeepers Creepers box office opened in 2,944 theaters and took in a U.S. gross of $37.9 million; then made $21.3 million internationally, generating a total of $59.2 million worldwide. [3] It broke the record for the highest Labor Day opening weekend in four days, holding the record until the 2003 release of its sequel, Jeepers Creepers 2. [15] After Labor Day weekend 2015, Jeepers Creepers held the #7 and #5 to the sequel. [15] Allowing films that had been released before Labor Day, Jeepers Creepers held the #16 spot for the four-day Labor Day weekend, with #9 going to Jeepers Creepers 2. [16] Awards Nominated: 28th Saturn Awards – Best Horror Film[17] Nominations: 28th Saturn Awards – Best Young Actor: Justin Long[17] Nominated: International Horror Guild Award – Best Film[18] Nominated: 34th Sitges Film Festival - Best Film[19] Sequel 2003, a sequel was released, Jeepers Creepers 22 The show in the second film took place four days after the first film. The Creeper and Darry the only character to appear in both films, although it's not the only actor to appear in both films. In the first film, actor Tom Tarantini appears as a small character McCoy AKA Roach who is a car thief and a regular at the Poho County jail. In the second film, he played Coach Dwayne Barnes. On September 11, 2015, Jeepers Creepers 3 was officially greened,[20] with a planned 2017 release. [21] Victor Salva returned as director, Jonathan Breck returned as The Creeper,[20] and Gina Philips returned as Trish Jenner, her first screen role in five years. [21] Production was halted in 2016 until it resumed in February 2017,[22] and finished in April. The film opens for what it says will only be a one-night show on September 26, 2017; it was then shown again October 4, and it was announced that they would air on the SyFy channel on October 28, with a Blu-ray/digital release on December 28, 2017.
